The European School Psychology Centre for Training (ESPCT) is visiting southern Sweden and the seaside locality of Lomma, providing a five day training course in Crisis management in schools.

The European School Psychology Centre for Training (ESPCT) has more than 15 years of experience in training professionals in schools and dealing with crisis events. ESPCT provides trainings, resources, and a community to school psychologists in the field of “Crisis Management in Schools” in touch with the world-wide development in this field. Recent neuropsychological researches show clearly, what was known before, how much learning – academic and behavioural – is impeded by traumatizing short-term or long-term events.

Since 2003, crisis management courses are organized for European School Psychologists. All trainees are in the database of the ESPCT and keep in touch. They might offer assistance in national training efforts and support in big tragic events at schools. The courses disseminate direct intervention and preventive strategies resulting in closer cooperation among experts and in establishing a supportive network. Severe incidents, especially the immigration crisis in recent time, affecting schools usually cause public interest and open a discussion about what is needed at schools. Prevention programs are taken into consideration and strategies for safer and more supportive schools.
